PUSH—DON'T SHOVE.

Push your town along—but don't shove it off the map.

Work for it, and not against it.

You may think that your deflection is but a single instance, and will have no injurious effect, but you are wrong.

If you are anything but a numskull there are others who are always ready to follow your lead, even though it result in the wrecking of your home town.

And you can't kick your home town without breaking your own toe.

Pushing is a good thing. You can push your town along by encouraging home industries. You can push it along by producing to the limit and keeping the profits at home. You can push it along by being of it as well as in it, and remembering that every dollar you keep in the town is just that much additional prosperity for the town and for you.

The home merchant knows you, is your friend, and wants to see you succeed. The mail order man doesn't know you, don't care a rap about you, and never wants to see anything but your money. Push your town along, brother, but don't shove it off the map.

The loyal citizen never breaks his own toe.—El Reno American.

NO MORE BOOZE FOR MEDICINE.

Another blow has been dealt alcohol. The medical profession has abandoned it. Such, at least, is the interpretation placed on the omission of whisky and brandy from the pending issue of the "United States Pharmacopeia," an official reference book used by pharmacists, physicians and chemists, says the Tulsa Democrat.

It is explained that up-to-date physicians are generally agreed that alcohol isn't much good as a medicine anyway, and very few of them now prescribe it either as a tonic. The commission in charge of the pharmacopeia has had difficulty, too, with the terms "whisky" and "brandy." Not being satisfied with the government's authorization of those names for various blends instead of the chemically pure articles, they chose to play safe by ruling out everything of the sort. It was felt, too, that drug stores would be subject to less temptation to carry on an illicit liquor business if the medical sanction for keeping a stock of ardent spirits was done away with.

After this scientific repudiation of the Demon Rum in the sphere of medicine, a man who wants a drink won't have any good excuse to offer except, perhaps, one of the old familiar "Seven Reasons for Taking a Drink."

"Because he's hot, because he's cold, because he's young, because he's old, because he's wet, because he's dry—or any other reason why."

CHILDREN AND MONEY.

A child learns that money has value long before it knows what money is. When a boy reaches the stage of desiring things that he knows his parents can not provide for him, his natural instinct is to earn enough money of his own to get them. He will set to work in many ways to do this. The manual training schools help him.

This, then, is the time to begin his serious instruction on how to save money, and if this beneficial understanding can be drilled into his mind to a degree that will fully make him understand its importance, he will be helped greatly throughout all his life. Nothing that boys and girls can learn at the very outstart exceeds in value the practice of thrift.

Money is not nearly so hard to get in the United States as in the countries of Europe, nor is thrift understood here as it is there. If the wage workers of the old world had the money earning chances that exist on this side their accumulations would total much more than they are now, ample as they seem to be toward furnishing enormous capital for carrying on the wars in which their governments are engaged.

Many banks in Pittsburg and elsewhere are ever industriously encouraging thrift, and not from selfish motives, either, but because they understand, as everybody else should, that the higher the standard of property ownership, and the larger the deposit of funds in bank, the greater the general prosperity. It is a benevolent principle that works good in many ways.

Parents, and particularly fathers with business training, should very carefully teach their children the value of money. The instruction should begin early, and should be impressed upon the mind that the saving of money and its judicious use is as much a public moral as it is a personal duty. If, in fact, not more. Many who have acquired vast fortunes have done so by using money more as an instrument of power than as a means of mere private accumulation. Get a man of this kind going and he attracts dollars as the pole does the magnetic needle.—Guthrie Leader.

EXPRESS PACKETTES.

Again the minstrel lams his lyre
 But not with "wild poetic fire,"
 It is another kind of flame
 And that is why the song is tame.

Still, you couldn't expect winter to last all summer.

The most thankless job in the world is handing out free advice.

St. Simps says he always notices that the warmer it gets the more severe the heat is.

We have often wondered what a woman says when she finds ants in the pantry and nobody else is near.

Every time we print a dispatch about the Germans cleaning up on their enemies, Wm. Frasier, who is strong for the allies, threatens to stop his paper.

Moreover, it will have to be admitted that it is pretty hard for baseball players to keep cool when it is about 97 in the shade and 118 in the sun and they are on the toboggan.

After thinking it over, Neil Johnson decided that it was better to take chances on being trimmed in a golf game than to show the white feather when challenged by a woman.

Probably the worst crank is the obstinate car crank. At least that is what J. C. Eisfelder thought after he had argued with his some ten or fifteen minutes yesterday afternoon.

It was not the Ollers, but Jake, the ump, who did the cruel deed to the Typos the last time. As a partisan of the Prints, it is up to us to blame somebody for it. Guess Jake will have to be hanged.

One Chickasha young man who prides himself on his dress went out to the country home of S. A. Wilson to spend the night. He carefully placed trousers under the mattress and the next morning he found a complete imprint of the springs on them. For the next thirty minutes the whole family took turns doing the pressing act.

THE TOILER'S TROLL.

Toil began when Adam did
 And grief began to be
 When Eve the golden apple ate
 Beneath the Eden tree.
 Toil has bent the back and toil has worn the hand,
 But everywhere that toil has gone the rose has filled the land!

Toil is old as morning is,
 And care is young as night,
 And love is where the red rose is,
 Beneath the tree of light;
 Toil has turned the lanes to streets
 and scarred the fields with steam,
 But brighter for the brawn of toil the ages' burnished dream.

Toil is give and toil is spend
 And never get again,
 And toil is in the things that bend
 The backs and brows of men;
 But toil has cleared the clouds away
 and built beneath the gloom
 The pillars that have let the sun peep in to kiss the bloom!

Toil began when chaos came,
 And with the ark and dove,
 But with its ache and with its pain
 It built immortal love;
 And it will stay, it will be music
 men may hear
 Along the path of lovely rest beyond the toiling sphere! —Anon.

 "A fortune teller told me yesterday that I would meet with a financial reverse."

"And did you?"
 "Yes, she charged me two dollars." —Boston Transcript.

Phone Frenzy.
 "I believe," said the impatient man, as he put aside the telephone, "that I'll go fishing."
 "I don't ordinarily. But it's the only chance I have of finding myself at the end of a line that isn't busy." —Washington Star.

TRAVELING MAN'S EXPERIENCE.

"In the summer of 1885 I had a very severe attack of cholera morbus. Two physicians worked over me from 4 a. m. to 6 p. m. without giving me any relief. An old friend told me they did not expect me to live; that I had best telegraph for my family. Instead of doing so, I gave the hotel porter fifty cents and told him to buy me a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, and take no substitute. I took a doubled one, according to the directions, and went to sleep after the second dose. At 5 o'clock the next morning I was called by my order and took a train for my next stopping point, a well man, but feeling rather shaky from the severity of the attack," writes H. W. Ireland, Louisville, Ky. Obtainable everywhere.—Adv. d&w
